Lesson of the Fire.

The fire of last week was not without its lesson to us, in that it showed us how inadequate and utterly powerless are our means of fighting flames. Although in the burning of the barns and sheds there was no chance to extinguish the fire, and it is doubtful if a hose playing on the flames would have succeeded in any way in lessening the destruction, yet, when we think of what might have been the result had the flames in the residences that were found on fire, got beyond control of the bucket brigade, we are led to consider the necessity of improving our fire-fighting methods.

The bucket brigade may be sufficient in small fires when the water is close at hand, but when the water is a block or more distant, great destruction can be wrought before the water can be got to the scene of the fire. Many methods will be suggested to the minds of the people, for aiding in extinguishing fires and we think, it will be a step in the right direction if our City Fathers will but take the matter up and devise some plan to help protect the citizens from fire, or that will facilitate in fighting it. If we cannot afford to install a water system at present, but are of the opinion that it can be done if the majority will look at the question in its proper light, then let some other means be suggested and put into operation immediately.

Another means of lessening the danger of fires, would be to establish fire districts, and prohibit the erection of any fire traps within that district and condemn those that may be standing. Something should be done to prevent the continuance of fire traps in the center of blocks for with them there, let the wind blow from which ever direction it will somebody in that section will be in danger of the flames. This is a question that has arose that demands the attention of the city council, and should not be delayed but promptly attended to.

Plenty of Work.

Senator Bowles was down from camp yesterday and reported work progressing nicely at the mine and out on the Acema road. At the mine they are now running the surface cars, and the property is fast being put in shape so that it will yield a good tonnage. The smelter will blow in again about the middle of June and there is ore enough on hand for a month's run. By that time it is hoped the road through Acema will be in working order. The company intends to rush the work on the road during the next month or six weeks and there is now a demand for an indefinite number of hands. All those who wish employment on the road should call up the company's office at Shem on the telephone and make arrangements to go to work. This has a very encouraging look for the laborer, for with the smelter and road employing men, the prospect is bright for the summer.
